

A Special Letter from Truffles

Dear Furriends,

Meow! My name is Truffles, and I heard there is a very special Vision Kiddo in your classroom!

Did you know that some kids wear an eye patch to help their vision?

An eye patch covers one eye so the other eye gets a chance to work extra hard. It's something their eye doctor has asked them to do to help their vision develop.

And let me tell you something...

Patching takes practice.

Patching takes patience.

And patching takes PAW-some determination!

That's why I started my Pumpkin Patch Project.

Every fall, I celebrate kids who patch and remind them that they aren't doing it alone.

There are patching kiddos all over the world!

But this year, I thought their friends should get to be part of the fun, too.

So I sent you a Pumpkin Patch Party!

Today you'll get to learn a little about how our eyes work, have some fun together, and most importantly, celebrate someone in your classroom who is working hard to help their vision.

We don't all see the world in exactly the same way.

Some of us wear glasses.

Some wear patches.

Some need other tools to help them see.

And some of us are cats who wear glasses just to make kids smile.

So have lots of fun at your Pumpkin Patch Party – and be sure to give your patching furriend an extra big cheer from me!

Because around here, we don't just wear patches...

We ROCK them!

Love & Purrs,

Truffles 🐾

Meet Truffles

Official Ambassador for Vision

P.S. I wear glasses to help kids remember that taking care of your eyes can be something to feel good about. And I happen to think glasses AND eye patches look pretty pawsome.